

James Moore

is Professor of Political Science at Concordia University. He has held visiting appointments at the Universities of Edinburgh, Manchester and the Australian National University. He has written extensively on the enlightenment in Scotland and Reformed Europe.

Under the direction of Prof. Moore, two courses will be offered at Lonergan College.

LUCC 398E/2

(also offered as INTE 398E/2, POLI 398R/2, HIST 398N/2, LBCL 398A/2, SOCI 398C/2)

Capitalism and Enlightenment: Natural Rights and Enlightenment

and

LUCC 398F/4

(also offered as INTE 398F/4, POLI 398S/4, HIST 398P/4, LBCL 398B/4, SOCI 398F/4)

Capitalism and Enlightenment: Commerce and Virtue.

These course will be interrelated but may be taken independently of each other.

Other Lonergan courses during 2000-1 are:

LUCC 202/2 and /4

The Creative Self

LUCC 298A/2

For God, Glory and Gold: Native and European Civilizations in the Americas

LUCC 298C/2

Peace Studies

LUCC 298E/4

Creativity and Conflict

LUCC 298F/2

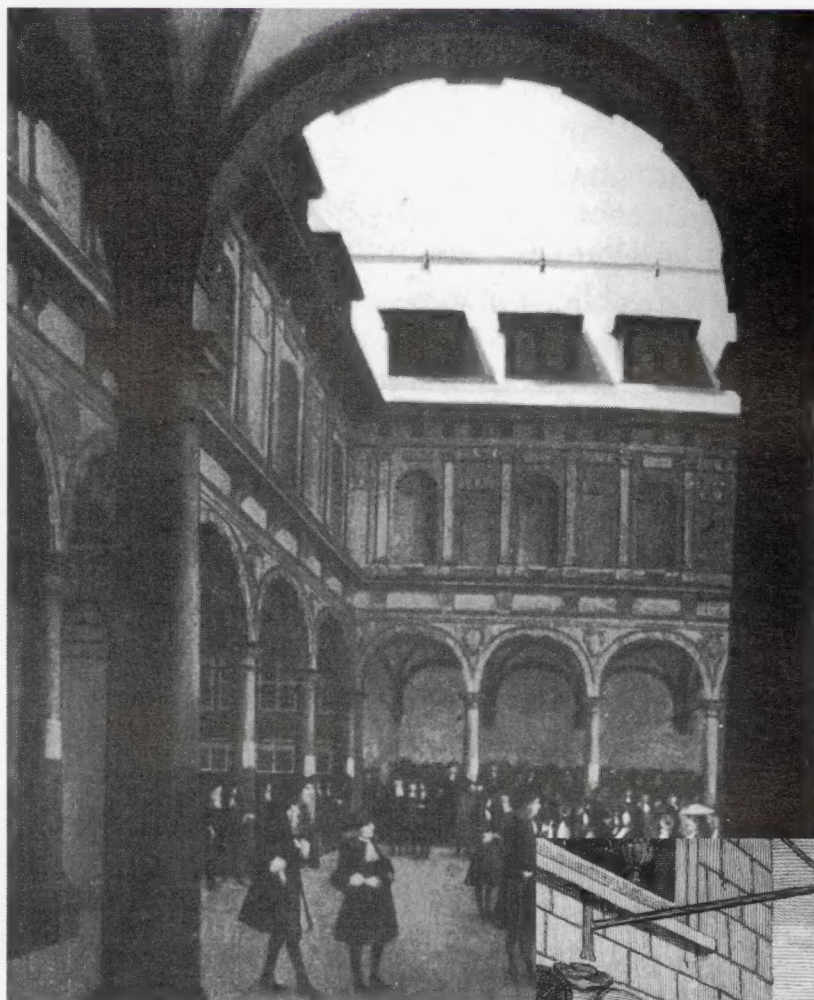

God, Chaos and Zen: Reconciling science and religion in the contemporary world

LUCC 441/4

Issues in Contemporary Values: Cross-cultural experiences in literature

Lonergan University College announces its Interdisciplinary Seminars for 2000-2001

Capitalism and Enlightenment

The Amsterdam Stock Exchange
Job Berckheyde (1668)

Commerce and Virtue

Beer Street
William Hogarth (1751)

An exploration of some of the ideas that have inspired social and political thought in the modern world. It will be argued that the spirit of capitalism had its origins not in Calvinism, as Max Weber and others have contended, but rather in the critics of Calvinism, in the Netherlands, in Protestant France, in Scotland and England. Among these critics were natural rights theorists (Hugo Grotius, John Locke, Jean Barbeyrac); their writings will be studied in LUCC 398E/2, Natural Rights and Enlightenment. In the winter term, in LUCC 398F/4, we will examine the challenges posed by commerce and industrial capitalism for moral and political writers: Shaftesbury, Mandeville, Hutcheson, Hume and Adam Smith.

All courses are open to all students. For further information, call Lonergan College (848-2280), or visit us on the Web at <http://artsci-ccwin.concordia.ca/lonergan/lonergan.html>

Real education for the real world

www.concordia.ca

